May, 2009 — Austin, Texas — Texas commercial general contracting company, Structura Inc., has added R. Bruce Lowe, the former Chief Operating Officer of Scott Thomas Construction (STC) to their staff of over 100. Lowe was hired in March of this year to serve as the team's Operations Manager, overseeing operations as well as helping to drive growth in both new and existing markets.

Rusty Morgan, President, Structura, Inc. is "excited to have Bruce on board, as he shares Structura's enthusiasm for unparalleled customer service and strong team building. Bruce will undoubtedly enable us to continue to foster financial and personal growth throughout the company while further encouraging structure and stability."

Lowe has over 18 years of construction management experience in both military and private sectors. While at STC he led the operations of the $40M/yr construction firm which specialized in national retail work and was licensed in 47 States. Prior to his tenure with STC he was a Senior Project Manager with DPR Construction. While at DPR he managed a variety of complicated and technically demanding federal, office, data center, healthcare, and tenant improvement projects ranging from $2M to $135M.

A graduate of Texas A&M University, Lowe holds a Master of Science in Construction Management and a Bachelor in Environmental Design and Building Construction. He served in the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) for eight years, where he was an Airborne Company Commander and Engineer Platoon Leader providing engineering expertise in combat construction.

Structura's hub offices are in Austin, with regional offices located in Dallas, Houston, and San Antonio. Lowe is currently working out of the Dallas regional office.
